Vocational Profiling

Saturday 11th February 2012
Astrology Workshop

Clients often consult astrologers when they're at a crossroads in their jobs. Perhaps they've been dissatisfied with work, or they've been fired, made redundant or feel that it's too late to start over. Or they haven't started work yet. With this workshop, by using vocational profiling and key parts of the horoscope, you'll get a glimpse of how to help clients discover the types of work that suit them, and uncover and define their blocks to achieving their goals. You'll also get ideas for how to pinpoint your own style, strengths and talents. Faye will discuss using the horoscope to:

- Make a career profile
- Spot vocation and life mission
- Identify talents, personal styles, image, goals, norms and values
- Address the ideal working environment and colleagues/bosses
- Build a C.V or website

Faye Cossar has over 25 years experience as an astrologer and therapist in private practice and business. Her approach is psychological, with a practical, result-oriented focus. Faye studied in New Zealand (her native land), England, Switzerland and the Netherlands, where she now lives.

She completed her Inner Child Therapy Integrative training in the Netherlands in 1998 and in 2004 completed an MA in Cultural Astronomy and Astrology at Bath Spa University.

She lectures and teaches regularly in the Netherlands and London and has lectured in other European cities. The book "From Here to There" contains a chapter on her work in business. Her book on Vocational Profiling will be published in December 2011.

Her website www.juxtaposition.nl shows her work within her company. For more information on her private practice see www.fayecossar.com.
